MOTIVE SOUGHT IN EXPLOSION ON JEFFERSON

MYSTERY BLAST WRECKS REAL ESTATE OFFICE

Midnight Explosion Demolishes Office of Leonard & Holt

Shortly after midnight Thursday morning a blast, presumably of dynamite wrecked a small real estate office belonging to Leonard & Holt on Jefferson avenue. The blast, which was evidently the work of some person with an enmity toward the realty firm, was so well placed that it resulted in the complete destruction of the building, which was reduced to wreckage, not much larger than match sticks and was scattered over an area of several acres.

The sound of the explosion wakened residents of all sections of town, and in the immediate vicinity of the blast several houses suffered broken windows. After the blast only a hole in the ground about a foot deep and about eight feet across was left to show where the building had stood.

The office had only recently been placed at this point by Leonard & Holt, and was set on a temporary foundation of redwood timbers. A telephone had been installed but no electric connection had been made.

Workmen clearing the trash from the scene of the explosion yesterday morning discovered fragments of time fuse all about the location, indicating that a long fuse had been used by the person setting off the explosion.

The case was being investigated yesterday by deputies from the office of Sheriff James J. McGrath.

SUPERVISORS TO HOLD MEETING FOR DISCUSSION

Those Having Opinions Asked to State Them

Next Monday morning will be an open forum day at the chambers of the San Mateo county board of supervisors. A special meeting of the board has been called for 10 o'clock of that day at which time arguments for or against the proposed consolidation of this county with San Francisco will be heard. An invitation has been issued by the board to chambers of commerce and other organizations to be represented at this meeting. Anyone having ideas to express on the subject will be given an opportunity to state his views.

The matter of consolidation of the two counties has been given much attention of late by the people of both counties. A meeting called on Wednesday by the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce was attended by representatives of both counties, at which time the many advantages of the proposed plan was discussed.

The meeting was addressed by William H. Nanry, who drew up the recently published report of the San Francisco Bureau of Governmental Research. This meeting was the second held in San Francisco and attended by many residents of this county. At these meetings the industrial and financial advantages which will result from the proposed move were brought out by the speaker.

Mrs. Albert Mansfield, who is on a visit with relatives in Los Angeles, is reported to be in a serious condition with double pneumonia. A telephone message received by relatives here this week from the southern city would indicate that grave doubts are held for her recovery.

Mrs. Sullivan Laid To Rest

Last Friday, Mrs. Ella Sullivan, formerly Miss Ella Gunning, passed away following a long and lingering illness. The funeral took place on Monday from Mount Carmel church and the interment was in Holy Cross cemetery, Menlo Park.

Mrs. Sullivan was born in Redwood City fifty-four years ago and spent the greater portion of her life in this city. A few years were passed at San Jose, where she resided with her husband.

Her mother passed away some years ago. She is survived by a brother, Emmet Gunning of Redwood City.

Her father, James Gunning died as a result of a run-away in this city in the eighties. He was coming from church, when his horse shied and plunged down Arguello street, throwing Gunning out of the rig. He never recovered from the injuries sustained, passing away a year later He was a pioneer of this section, having first located in the then bustling town of Searsville in the sixties. He later came to Redwood City, where he conducted a horseshoeing shop on Main street. He was an exert farrier, having for customers such men as James G. Flood, Leland Stanford, Senator C. N. Felton, Timothy Guy Phelps, Horace Hawes, Faxon Atherton and Thomas Selby. Gunning did a lucrative business, acquiring many holdings in Redwood City.

Gunning was a hale fellow, jovial and generous with a large following of personal friends. In his day he was the best known and the most popular citizen of San Mateo county. His sudden demise was the occasion o great sorrow in this city. The day of the funeral all business houses closed, and the flag at the cocrthouse was hung at half mast.

Mrs. Gunning developed the property left by her husband. Today it is valuable. For many years the Gunning building on Main street was the home of the Times-Gazette for a quarter of a century. The property was absorbed by the Sequoia Hotel Company, when the big carravansary was erected some years ago.

Mrs. Sullivan enjoyed the friendship of a wide circle and was universally esteemed and loved by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance.

The Third Degree of Masonry was conferred on a candidate last evening in Redwood City Lodge No. 168 F. & A. M. by a team consisting of past masters of the lodge. The past masters night is an annual event in this lodge.

Mrs. Mary MacPherson of Saratoga was a visitor this week with her daughter, Mrs. Fred George of this city.

Mrs. Tate Winner

The $50.00 special prize offered last week was won by Mrs. A. W. Tate. Congratulations are due Mrs. Tate as the winner of this prize, but those who tried for the special prize and did not win it are still not losers as the votes gained by working hard may be the means of winning a better prize than might otherwise have been won.

The Fifth Prize

The fifth prize will be a beautiful watch valued at $45.00 which was secured at Hilton's Jewelry Store

As the votes now stand there are several in the race who have approximately an equal chance to win one of the cars, so it depends upon the work that is done between now and next Wednesday, the day the contest closes who shall be the happy winners of the cars, and other prizes.

The campaign manager has seen contests so close that one subscription meant success or failure, so contestants should not overlook even one subscription.

There will be no more prize ballots but all subscriptions for three or four years up to six years will count double votes up to 4 p. m. Saturday, October 27th.

The regular extra votes on amounts will prevail during the remainder of the campaign.

Just five days remain in which to pile up the votes for the final count and in that time the lowest one today may forge ahead, so do not stop work until the last minute.

Just so you have your subscriptions and reserve votes in the ballot box at 7:30 p. m.

Only Workers

Only the workers' names now remain in the list and it is up to the remaning candidates and their friends to decide who shall be the winners, as the Times-Gazette has no favorites.

Closing Rules

The closing rules will be as follows: Today's Times-Gazette gives the standing of contestants with the subscription votes east for each up to 2 p. m. Wednesday, the 24th, but not the reserve ballots.

Saturday, October 27th will be the last day candidates will turn in to the campaign manager. After that all subscriptions and money will be placed in the ballot box. No information as to standing of candidates will be given out after Saturday, the 27th.

IMPORTANT

The contest closes at 7 p. m., October 31st, but candidates have until 7:30 to get their subscriptions and reserve ballots into the ballot box. After time it will be too late. DON'T BE LATE!

Locked Ballot Box

In order that every one may know the contestants have a square deal, the last three days of the campaign voting will be in secret. In the Times Gazette office a locked ballot box will be placed and the votes will be deposited therein by the contestants themselves. No one will know how much anyone has but the candidates until the subscriptions are removed by the judges. After Saturday the campaign will be out of the hands of the Times-Gazette and in the hands of the judges.

Special Notice

The Times-Gazette cannot be responsible for any votes that are not placed in the ballot box. Contestants must see that their votes are placed in the ballot box themselves.

Receipt Book Stubs

All contestants are requested to save their receipt book stubs as their commissions will be calculated on the amount shown therein, in case they do not win a prize.

Reserve Votes

Do not overlook the fact that many contestants have reserve votes which will not be voted until the close of the campaign.

Check Votes

Contestants are requested to check their votes as they appear in the Times Gazette today, as they will be asked to certify the correctness of the same.

The Winners

The counting of the votes will be made in the First National Bank and the winners will be announced in the Times Gazette office as soon as the count is finished.

While on an automobile trip with her father and mother on Monday, the car in which they were riding skidded and turned over in a ditch.

A Magazine Pilot Changes His Mind

After studying aviation magazines for ten months, Edgar C. Bailey of Rockaway Beach, purchased a Curtiss Jenny and had it delivered to Redwood City Airport. Up to this time he has taken only one ride—in an airline plane from San Francisco to Sacramento. Steve Ward of San Bruno consented to fly the plane. After taking four pleasure trips, but no instruction, with Steve, he decided flying was baby play. He has since changed his opinion.

Early Wednesday morning Bailey came to the Redwoon City Airport and without unnecessary delay embarked upon his maiden voyage alone. From the way in which Bailey describes his experienie in handling the plane, the citizens probably thought the pilot or plane was having epileptic fits. Twenty-five minutes later he succeeded in bringing the plane to rest again safely at the airport.

He says he needs to read another magazine or two before attempting the air, and advises a course of instruction in flying preferably to magazine instruction.

Wilbur Doxsee returned to his place at the San Mateo County Title Co. office this week after having been confined to his home or a week with an attack of the "flu."

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Property value in Alameda county is $529,083,095, according to a statement issued recently by the state controller's office. The value ranks Alameda county as the third wealthiest in the state, headed only by San Francisco and Los Angeles. Real estate value is placed at $216,772,775, while improvements are estimated at $164,249,600. Personal property is valued at $64,030,725.

Members of the household of the late Luther Burbank, plant wizard, at Santa Rosa announced last week that the small one-room building formerly used as the office by Burbank, would be taken to Detroit, Mich., as an exhibit in the Ford Historical Museum. The announcement said Mrs. Burbank had donated the building to the museum, adding that it would be placed beside the first laboratory used by Thomas A. Edison.

Albert Bettens, manager of the Sacramento Tourist and Convention Bureau, announced last week that Sacramento has just been awarded the 1929 convention of the California Parent-Teacher Association, a conclave that will bring approximately 1,500 delegates and visitors to Sacramento. The convention wil be held from May 21st to 24th. The gathering will be one of the largest obtained for Sacramento next year and will bring together educators and those interested in education from all parts of the state.

Clarence S. Morrill, superintendent of the State Bureau of Criminal Identification, recently celebrated Discovery Day by discovering that California peace officers have discovered 10,352 bootleggers in the last five years. Morrill's discovery, following a survey of reports filed by police departments and sheriff's offices, also reveals that the annual number of prohibition law arrests has increased 800 per cent since 1923. Which proves, with the filing of nearly 5,000 liquor law charges in the last year, that California bootleggers are becoming more numerous, more careless or something, according to Morrill.

California will spend nearly $6,000,000 in the betterment of the Pacific Highway by the end of this current biennium, announces E. A. Crowley, general manager of the Pacific Highway Association, in quoting facts and figures from a report received from C. H. Purcell, state highway engineer. Work completed, under way or advertised, in carrying out plans for improving the Pacific Highway, aggregate $3,892,146.63, reports Purcell. Other work provided for in the present budget amounts to $1,979,473.75, he adds. The grand total, $5,871,620.38, will represent the reconstruction of 173.08 miles of this highway.

Four o'clock is the zero hour for accidents in most California factories. More industrial mishaps, the state compensation insurance department announced last week, occur at that hour than any other in the course of the day. Another peak hour for accidents, but not so pronounced as 4 p. m., when one-sixth of all injuries occur, is at 9 o'clock in the morning. Superintendents and foremen blame fatigue for the up-curve at 4 p. m. The morning peak is attributed to the possible loss of breakfast for having overslept. A hearty breakfast and a little additional care when fatigue manifests itself are recommended as two important preventives for accidents to workmen.

Arrests for violating the prohibition law during the fiscal year ending June 30th were markedly more than double the arrests made during the preceding twelve-month period, and were nine times as great as for the fiscal year of 1923-24. Figures announced a few days ago by Clarence S. Morrill show a steady trend of arrests for violations of the dry statues ever since the enactment of the prohibition law, and today running afoul of the eighteenth amendmena is the second most common "crime" in California. It runs second only to vagrancy, which is regarded by police officers as the meagerest of offenses.

California now has 23,665 wards, 7,468 of them girls and women, in the fourteen state prisons, reformatories and hospitals, Earl E. Jensen, director of institutions, announced recently. In addition, Jensen said, 4,743 persons are on parole, 1,552 from the Folsom and San Quentin penitentiaries. Population of the fourteen state institutions was announced as follows: Sonoma State Home, 2,270; Pacific Colony, 127; Agnew Hospital, 2,023; Mendocino Hospital, 1,351; Napa Hospital, 2,823; Norwalk Hospital, 1,665; Patton Hospital, 2,963; Stockton Hospital, 3,126; Industrial Home for Adult Blind (Oakland), 120; Ventura School for Girls, 161; Preston School of Industry, 619; Whittier School for Boys, 311; Folsom Prison, 2,183; San Quentin Prison, 3,923.

Two $5,000,000 corporations, one a finance concern and the other an aviation company, last week filed incorporation papers with the Secretary of State. The Sierra Company, Los Angeles finance and investment organization, is headed by C. Brice Kearsley Jr. of Santa Monica and George E. Farrand, M. H. Shiel, Eula M. Lee and Claire Moorhead, all of Los Angeles. Western Air Express Corporation, aerial transportation company, formed under the laws of Delaware, announced H. M. Wright of Los Angeles as its California representative.

Importance of the State taxation amendment and the Park and Olympic Games bond issues on the November ballot were emphasized by Governor Young a few days ago in addressing the California real estate association at the opening of its twenty-fourth annual convention at Sacramento. The need for a fair and legal plan of taxing banks in California, the wisdom of providing funds for establishment of a comprehensive State Park system and the arrangements under which the 1932 Olympic Games are to be held in Los Angeles set forth by the Governor in discussing the three measures.

Governor C. C. Young's budget for the next two years will contain an allowance of slightly over $1,000,000 for permanent improvement at the seven state teachers' colleges, State Finance Director Alexander R. Heron announced last week. Reports on enrollment show 10 per cent increases at several of the colleges, with the gain in some of them running up to 21 per cent, Heron said.

Ignoring the old adage, "the woman pays," the California State Supreme Court was on record last week in San Francisco exactly opposite. In fact the court ruled that if a woman goes into business and loses money, friend husband is required to foot the bills. The decision, regarded as far-reaching in the annals of domestic law, was affirmed by four of the judges and protested by three. It was based upon the California principle of community property, which is shared by man and wife in this state.

Predictions that the dairy industry and the consuming public will demand additional legislation governing the manufacture and sale of ice milk were made last week by A. E. Reynolds, ice cream specialist of the State Department of Agriculture. Enforcing proper labeling and advertising of ice milk, a comparatively new product, has recently become a difficult problem for State authorities Reynolds said.

Reckless drivers and speeders take notice! Not only may drivers' licenses be revoked for persistent violations in the future, but your carelessness may cost you the use of your automobile. Such a possibility loomed recently when a proposal to revoke automobile license plates in addition to operators' permits as a penalty for reckless driving, received the enthusiastic endorsement of the Safety Department of the California Development Association.

More than 200,000 tourists, and among them 50,000 permanent "immigrants," came into California between July 1st and September 30th through the border service stations conducted by the state division of motor vehicles. In the three-month period, the division's records disclose 68,282 automobiles from states not immediately contiguous entered the Golden State, bearing an average of three persons to a car. This is an average of 742 automobiles per day.

Construction of a bridge by the Southern Pacific across Carquinez Straits has been authorized by the secretary of war, according to railroad officials in San Francisco. The bridge will take the place of the ferry now operated between Port Costa and Benicia. The cost is estimated at $12,000,000. Announcement of plans to build the bridge was made by the Southern Pacific several months ago. The bridge is to be concrete and is to carry double tracks. There will be ten spans of 408 feet in length, the average clearance above high water will be seventy feet. Train operation from Washington and Oregon will be cut ten minutes.

Improvements for the University of California totaling $10,000,000 and involving the erection of an auditorium and museum on the Berkeley campus were announced last week by Robert G. Sproul, controller of the institution in an address before the Berkeley Downtown Association. Sproul revealed that the university has been promised $1,000,000 by an old friend and this amount will be available for the improvements also. Included in the improvements outlined by the controller were the Giannini Hall for agriculture research, the $1,750,000 Rockefeller International House, a $1,000,000 life science building and a new $500,000 infirmary.

Permanent improvement appropriations totaling more than $1,000,000 will be included in the 1929-21 budgets for the state teachers colleges, whose enrollments for 1929 have increased on an average of 10 per cent. This announcement was made a few days ago by A. R. Heron, state directors of finance, who said the permanent improvement allotments wil be slightly in excess of those for the present biennium. Heron declared the enrollment increase of the colleges is remarkable in view of the higher educational requirements put into effect this year, including the four years' course for graduation. In some instances he said the enrollment increases have been as high as 21 per cent over last year.

Reports received in San Francisco from Los Angeles state that the Pacific Gas and Electric Company has closed a contract with the Mexican Seaboard Oil Company for construction of a 240-mile pipe line to bring natural gas to the San Francisco region. The estimated cost is $15,000,000. The Pacific Gas and Electric Company officials at San Francisco refused to comment on the report other than to reiterate their statements of several weeks ago that the company has plans under way to pipe natural gas into San Francisco, but the plan is not completed as yet. The reported pipe line would include branches to serve the various communities along its route.

Advertising benefits which California will derive from the Olympic Games when they are held in the State in 1932 will alone more than offset the $1,000,000 State aid toward the cost of staging the games, it was declared recently by Paul Shoup, executive vice president of the Southern Pacific and a director of the California Tenth Olympiad Association. Shoup's statement was in support of the Olympic Games measure, which will be submitted at the coming election as Proposition No. 2 on the ballot.

Clarence S. Morrill, superintendent of the state bureau of crimnal identification, is on the program for the convention of the California Peace Officers' Association at San Bernardino, November 15th to 17th, to speak on the practical use of the teletype in criminal apprehension. E. H. Gum, sheriff of Placer county, will give a report as a member of the committee on state police, while B. W. Dobbins, district attorney of Solano county, will report for the peace officers' committee on practical suggestions to the state crime commission.

Athletes Get Too Much Attention, Says Teacher

Too much time is wasted celebrating athletic victories by students, business men and the public generally, while a "lamentable lack of appreciation is accorded scientific attainments," Prof. Ira B. Cross of the University of California believes.

Addressing the Lions club at Berkeley, Calif., the economic instructor criticized Berkeleyans who greeted members of the university crews, victors in the Olympic shell races at Amsterdam. Only two men who rowed in the winning race arrived home, but schools were given a half holiday.

"If Doctor Millikan, discoverer of the cosmic ray, a truly wonderful feat, paid a visit to Berkeley, would he be given the welcome that these two oar pullers were accorded?" asked Professor Cross. "Of course not, he would hardly be noticed."

The professor also deplored Berkeley's attempt to attract industries, declaring that the city "cannot remain an intellectual center and also become a factory town."

Chicago White Sox Were Strong on Pop-Up Flies

Tommy Connolly, the veteran American league umpire, relays this one from Joe Berger, the shortstop of the Chicago White Sox some years back.

The White Sox were in a disastrous hitting slump and their turn at bat was just one pop-up after another. It was getting on the nerves of the players.

Berger was going to his position in the field just after an inning in which three of his mates had popped up to the infield. He sighed a sigh as he passed Connolly. "Tommy," he said, "some day we're going to run across a team that's weak on those pop-ups and were going to beat them to death."

Haskell Indians Living Up to Nomadic Instincts

The Haskell Indians will defend their title of the "most traveled" college football team again this fall. Of a ten-day schedule only two will be played at the stadium of Haskell institute at Lawrence while road trips will take the braves from New Orleans to Minnesota and east nearly to the Atlantic seaboard.

Fifty Indians, representing twenty-four tribes over twenty-two states, comprise the 1928 squad. Teams to be played include the University of West Virginia, Loyola of New Orleans, Minnesota university, St. Xavier of Cincinnati and Loyola of Chicago.

Loughran's Big Offer

Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, at his camp at Harvey's Lake, near Wilkesbarre, Pa., has received a cablegram from a Buenos Aires promoter offering him $25,000 for a heavyweight bout there at the end of November. No opponent was mentioned in the cable. Joe Smith, Loughran's manager, said he believed the opponent the Argentine has in mind is Luis Firpo. It is the opinion of those on the inside that Loughran will accept.

SUPERSTITIONS OF COACH McMILLAN

Former Centre College Football Star Played Hunches.

Bo McMillan, the famous and colorful Centre college quarterback of a few years ago, who took Charley Bachman's place as head coach of the Kansas Aggies, has a thousand and one football superstitions. At least he did have them while he went to school. Perhaps, as a coach, he has found superstitions do not win games and has discarded them, but anyway he had them at one time. And how!

Bo had a blue shirt and a red necktie, for instance, that he never failed to wear whenever Centre went on a trip. He put them on when he dressed to leave town and kept them on, except for the time he wore his football suit, until he returned. Now Centre in those days took a number of long trips. The team played on both the East and West coasts. But even on trips that kept him on the hop for a week he stuck to that old shirt and necktie though soot lined the wrinkles of both.

Bo also had an old belt he wore in high school down at Fort Worth. He kept it when he went to college and never went into a game without it. Oh, yes, quite superstitious. He even made over every pair of football pants he wore at Centre, if just to tear open the seams and sew them again himself.

Centre was a much photographed team in its winning years, and not the least photographed by any means of all the men was Bo. However, for all the insistent attempts of the photographers to snap him before a game, and insistent is right, they never could. Bo would have none of it. After the game, all right, but before—never.

He insisted further on being the last man to enter the park, the last man to leave the dressing room and the last man to set foot on the field. Even Charley Moran, the coach, had to precede him.

Of superstitious nature, he naturally played the wildest hunches. One night before a big game Bo dreamed he ought to put a pair of dice on the roof of a certain high building. No sooner dreamed than done. He got up the next morning, put on his sooty blue shirt and red necktie, picked out a high building and stuck the dice, "snake eyes" up, in a cornice.

Centre won the game.

Golf Ball Strikes Tree and Is Holed Out in One

The 150-yard No. 3 hole of the Highland Park course in Birmingham, Ala., is an easy par 3 or a hard 5 and is famous as a place where freak shots are becoming the rule rather than the exception.

Joe Spain, Birmingham amateur, was trailing in a threesome when they reached No. 3. He pulled his mashie shot over the trees bordering a street and the ball landed on a concrete uphill driveway. Taking a kick backward, the ball came through the boughs of the trees and landed a few feet off the green, from where Spain, still using his mashie, clouted it into the cup for a birdie.

Col. Karl Landgrebe's hole in 1 on No. 3, however, still remains the outstanding freak shot of the course. With a tremendous drive from the tee, the colonel sent his ball sailing down the fairway to the right of the green, where it struck a tree trunk, caromed to the green and rolled several club lengths into the cup.

Timm Is Big Help

"Big" Timm from Idaho is putting up an excellent game in the backfield for Coach Zuppke this fall. He is mighty fast on his feet and is a valuable asset to the team.

Big Al Weston Is Back Again in Eagle Uniform

Al Weston, ace of the Boston college backfield the last three years, set at rest all rumors that he would not play football this year when he appeared in a uniform the other day.

The big Needham boy declared that, inasmuch as he had played football last fall and had been playing baseball practically every day since early spring, he thought a week's rest would do no harm and perhaps some good. He looked to be in perfect condition and spent the afternoon following the new plays as put on by a temporary first team.

Another newcomer was Frank Lyons, former Newton High star, and a substitute back the last two years. His work as caddy master at Brae Burn has kept him in good condition.

Own Olympic Games

The British empire is to have its own set of Olympic games, according to M. M. Robinson, manager of the Canadian Olympic track and field team. A British empire sports federation is to be formed for this purpose, Mr. Robinson said on his arrival from Europe recently, and the first track and field meet of the athletes will be held at Hamilton in 1930. Pledges to send teams to the 1930 games have been secured from sports officials in every section of the empire.

POULTRY

HOUSE PULLETS EARLY IN FALL

The mistake is often made of allowing the pullets to remain upon the growing range too long. If the birds are healthy and all other conditions are correct, there is no reason why they should not be removed to the laying houses just as soon as they reach maturity.

Flocks hatched in March or earlier are ready for the permanent quarters after midsummer. If we leave them on the range too long, they will start laying, and the result is that a later removal to the laying house will stop production or slow it up. One of the surest ways to bring on a premature molt is the removal of pullets, already laying, to new quarters.

We naturally expect pullets, which start production in the summer, to have a late molt, but it is a serious matter when this molt comes on two months before we ought to expect it. I believe we should hatch the pullets at a time that will bring them to maturity at just the time we want them to start laying, says a writer in the Indiana Farmers' Guide. At any rate, the mature birds should not be left on the range after they are ready to start laying. Leghorns, and other egg breeds, should be ready for housing at five months of age, while the large breeds need another month to reach maturity.

It is a good plan to start feeding the egg mash at about the time the birds reach maturity. We should not feed too heavily of egg-making mash until they are mature. It is a mistake to force early production at the expense of size. Immature pullets lay small eggs and that is not a desirable condition.

Clean up the houses and be ready for the pullets just as early as you begin to find eggs about the range. House them at this time and you will find it will make a good deal of difference in the production of the flock during the fall and winter.

Supply Needed Minerals to Aid Egg Production

It has been estimated that the shell of an average egg is 8 per cent of the egg, and that a hen with a yearly production of 160 eggs requires 1.6 pounds of minerals to cover her egg production, besides what she needs in the line of mineral matter for the upkeep of her own body. It is the lack of this mineral matter that causes a hen to start the egg-eating, or the feather-picking habits. Both of these vices are due to a large extent, to a deficiency in the ration of some element that the fowls are craving.

Keeping oyster shell before the hens continually helps to supply minerals to a considerable extent. Fresh bones run through a bone grinder supply much needed elements. In some towns bones may be obtained from the local butcher shops.

In Ohio a good formula for supplying the mineral matter to the hens' ration has been worked out. This consists of 60 per cent finely ground bone meal, 20 per cent finely ground limestone and 20 per cent salt. This is thoroughly mixed, and 4 per cent is added to the mash in place of meat scraps. If less than 10 per cent of meat scraps is used both the mineral ration and the meat scraps may be included in the mash.

Poultry Items

Sweet or sour milk seems to give equally good results in chick feeding.

Colds and roup are preventable diseases. If we remove the causes the diseases will not occur.

Watch for the pullets that lay early, and mark them. They make the high producers—the ones to get next spring's hatching eggs from.

A chicken may now be hatched by electricity, raised and grown with an electric brooder and electric light, and finally cooked for your table by the same energy.

The vitality and vigor of the stock must be conserved. If one breeds from weak and diseased stock there will be constant trouble with colds and roup.

Leghorn pullets should not begin to lay until they are from five to six months old. General purpose breeds take about a month longer.

Carbolineum, creosote, or crude carbolic acid make the best spray material to use in poultry houses to keep down red mites.

Although it may seem that the birds are foraging an adequate food supply during the summer, their ration is often incomplete, and is very frequent-short in protein. Feeds rich in this material are not always grown on the farm, and is a direct result of the deficiency.

Geese are the best grazers of all poultry. A large part of their diet after the first four weeks is composed of green feed. For this reason they cannot be raised successfully unless feed of this kind is furnished.

Blackhead is by far the most serious malady affecting turkeys. It is caused by a one-celled animal parasite which is present in large numbers in the droppings of infected birds. It is found in turkeys of all ages but is most fatal in young poults.

A heavy layer is like a heavy producing cow. The hen needs a definite amount of feed to maintain her body. If she is going to produce eggs it must be done on the feed which she eats in excess of her body requirements.

It is extremely difficult, to estimate by height or by size of tusks alone, the age of a young elephant moving with a herd. It is interesting to note the recorded growth in captivity of an African elephant named Bama. He was captured in the Bas-Uele, August 2, 1902. On that day he measured four feet two inches in height. A quarter of a century has now elapsed. He has remained throughout that time in his own district. He is now eight feet three inches.

The West Wants Hoover

The campaign is drawing to a close. In a little more than a week the people of the United States will register their choice for the presidency. Whom shall it be Al Smith of New York or Herbert Hoover of California?

Mr. Hoover being a man of unusual experience and education and having all the qualifications to a superior degree for the exalted office to which he aspires, the citizens of the Golden State should favor the Californian. He knows the west, is in sympathy with the people in building up a great commonwealth on the shores of the mighty Pacific. He knows the wants of California, and if chosen to the presidency he would surely do more for the state than Al Smith of New York. Mr. Smith is an elegant gentleman but he is not acquainted with the needs and demands of the west as the Republican nominee is. The west is in need of development. It wants a man at the White House who is interested in the state and is acquainted with its people and their desires. Mr. Hoover has traveled from one end of the state to the other. He has delved in its mines, worked on the farm and his heart beats in unison with the people of his adopted state. With Mr. Hoover at Washington, California would fare well. Of course, the state will give its electoral vote to the Republican candidate but the vote should be overwhelming and decisive and with such a majority as will impress our eastern friends with the way Herbert Hoover is held in his adopted state.

San Mateo County should give Mr. Hoover a big vote, a vote of appreciation. It is his home section. Party lines should be obliterated and he should be given a unanimous vote. All are urged to support the candidate of the peninsula, the man who can and will do more for it than any other nominee. Forget your partisan allegiance this year and vote for California's favorite son—Herbert Hoover.

—D. E. O'KEEFE

William G. Marvin, director of the Hoover-Curtis Clubs of the state, is doing splendid work for the Republican party by his eloquent addresses and sound logic and writings. He is stumping the state and is everywhere acclaimed by the citizens, who are anxious to listen to his words of eloquence and sound doctrine of republicanism. He is a young man of ability, a gifted orator and thus equipped he is throwing his whole soul into the campaign that a big vote may be rolled up November 6th for California's favorite and gifted son, Herbert Hoover.

The total registration of the voters of San Mateo County as compiled by County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese is 30,500. The political affiliation of the voters is, Democratic, 6,626; Republican, 22,339; prohibition 18; and socialist, 106. It is but fair to assume with such an overwhelming Republican registration that Hoover will receive a majority of over 5000 in the county. From a cursory straw vote taken recently the indications are that the majority for the Republican nominee will be around that figure.

Senator Samuel M. Shortridge is battling for the Republican Party, as he always has, and is carrying the doctrine of Republicanism to the south land, where he is popular and where the people know his worth and where his convincing and eloquent speeches will make many votes for Herbert Hoover. Mr. Shortridge will cover the state, speaking up until the last moment before eletion. He has stumped the state for forty years, always addressing large audiences. He knows the tenets of his party well and can expound them with more eloquence and effectiveness than ony other orator in the country. Should Hoover be elected no man in the senate will be closer to him than the senator from Menlo Park. Senator Shortridge deserves the thanks and gratitude of the Republican party for the great work and effort he has put forth for it.

Hon. A. M. Free, the Republican candidate for congress in this district, is certain of re-election. His record in congress is without a mar or blemish. He has worked consistently and ably for his district and always has supported the administration to a marked degree. Mr. Free is a useful man at Washington for the state and district on account of his long experience and wide acquaintance. While it is true that his opposition is only negligible, yet the Republians when they go to the polls November 6th should see to it that Free's name is on the ballot. Vote for Free and thereby assure the distrit of the retention of an able and efficent legislator at Washington.

The question for the voters of San Francisco and the Peninsula to decide is: What will Al Smith of New York do for California? and what will Herbert Hoover of San Francisco do for the West?

The Lord helps those that help themselves. What can we do to assist in making San Francisco harbor the greatest port in the world and Redwood City harbor the finest on the Peninsula?

How can any Californian fail to vote for Herbert Hoover?

Sex Differences In Constipation—How To Deal With Them

By Anthony Bassler, M. D.
New York City

A popular writer has said, "woman, woman thy constipated sex." But man is just as much so. The real difference is that in woman it is low in the colon, while in man it is higher. In both, the effects on health and well being are the same, and these run all the way from none at all to quite considerable, according to the individual.

No physician has ever wisely concluded as to what normality in bowel movements is. The majority have standardized this on one movement a day. Some, with certain institutions, have claimed there should be three each day—one for each meal. The truth is that one sees persons in whom a movement two or three times a week is sufficient and normal, others in whom daily movements are necessary, and still others in which they must be more frequent. If health is being maintained, if the movements are soft (or the last part is) and if there is a feeling of satisfaction and of emptying after movements, it is normal whatever the frequency.

The American public takes too much medicines for constipation. Excepting in most unusual instances, cascara, rhubarb, mineral oil, and perhaps an occasional dose of phenolphthalein or a small dose of calomel, is the limit of medication that should be employed. To go beyond these and take the more drastic substances in a continued way is a purgative crime. It always causes a crippling of the colon that is hard to cure.

There are "57 varieties" of constipation, as there are of headache. To cure them, the cause must be determined and treated logically. In the absence of the exactly known cause, one should experiment with simple things, preferably those of a food character. An abundance of fruit, fresh vegetables, salads and "roughage" is most helpful. Bran and psyllium seeds are easily taken 'roughage.' If the bowel is spastic, "roughage" in the diet intensifies the constipation, and makes matters worse. Agar-agar works well with the young and old, but only moderately well with those in middle life. An abundance of lactose sugar taken several times in the day on an empty stomach have proved with many a good antacid, nutriment and eliminator for bowel and kidneys. Excepting in thin people, five or more glasses of tap water are sometimes laxative. Stewed prunes, an old German advice for constipation, are still worth while. Then cooked with dried figs and a few senna pods, usually they answer effectively. The mineral oils abundantly sold for the purpose are not so effective as the soft paraffins (petroleum jelly, vaseline. The latter can be heated slightly if desired to be drunk as a fluid.

The greatest causes of constipation are ignorance, false modesty, laziness, over-eating or under-eating and lack of exercise. By ignorance is meant not observing or judging the number of movements one's body should have to keep healthy. By false modesty is meant not responding as soon as possible to the call when the sensation for bowel elimination occurs. By laziness is meant just what the word implies. Over and under eating are controllable by will power, while lack of exercise can be made up by golf, tennis, walking gymnastics or calisthenics nights and mornings.

High School NOTES

San Mateo is the next school to be played by the Cherokees in football, and after the results of the Burlingame played Saturday, October 20, optimistic views of the game are held. Fourteen to thirteen was the score against the panthers, and a much larger score is anticipated in the San Mateo game, if everything goes as slated.

San Mateo is the ancient rival of the school, Palo Alto now holding the first place in the hearts of the Sequoians, but due to the fact that a victory over the Bearcats has not been obtained in many years, the bleachers will probably be filled to their capacity Friday afternoon, October 26.

The lightweight basketball teams both lost to Palo Alto Friday night, but they intend to make up for their defeat this Friday night, when they play the San Jose team here.

June 1 is the date set for the completion of all the additions being constructed. The music building will be the first to be completed, some 20 men already are actively at work. The outdoor basketball court has been removed, the material going towards the bonfire being built for the rally to be held Thursday night, November 1. The bonfire will be preceded by a program in the auditorium.

Students have agreed to furnish tricks, and they will cart off all the boxes that can be found around town. The object of the rally committee this year is to build a bigger and better bonfire than ever before, and to have a better and more interesting program than ever before.

"The Mysterious Master," an operetta composed by Otis Carrington, musical instructor of the high school, will be presented to the public November 17. Fifty-eight students will compose the cast, all participants being members of the choral classes. There will be no admission for this operetta, as the first operetta is always presented to the public free of cost.

Visitors at the A. C. Argo home are Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Manley, missiosaries of India. Mrs. Manley and Mr. Argo are sister and brother. Mr. and Mrs. Argo of Spokane, Washington, parents of Mr. Argo and Mrs. Manley, are also at the Argo home here.

Night Fire Damages Main Street Building

The building on the property of Mrs. A. Cook on lower Main street was damaged by a fire at about one o'clock Tuesday morning. The fire appeared to have started in the soft drink and card room of William Plump in the northern end of the building. This end of the building was practicaliy destroyed.

An unused garage in the middle of the building was also damaged and the lunch room in the southern end escaped with scarcely any damage. The fire department responded to a call from box 13 in time to save the greater part of the building and to prevent the fire from spreading to any neighboring buildings.

The Cook building occupies a position adjoining that of the Wahl building which is now being removed to make room for the extension of Broadway.

WOODSIDE

The Women's Hoover Club of Woodside is doing some very active campaigning in this district and if any Republican entitled to vote on November 6th fails to cast his or her ballot it will not be the fault of this organization.

Woodside has been suffering extensively if not intensively from the ravages of influenza. No very serious cases have been reported but many entire families have been confined to their beds with slight attacks of this disease.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Schilling and family are the latest of our summer residents to return to the city for the winter.

The new home of Edward Wobber is nearing completion and will be opened shortly. The home of Herman Wobber is expected to be ready for occupancy by Christmas time while the Hammond home and the one being built for Alfred B. Swinnerton will be ready the first of the year.

The Woodside Fire Department has issued invitations for a masquerade dance to be held on Saturday night.

Woodside is proud of her representation upon the Sequoia High School football team. Tom Shine, Jack Hosford, Burnett Dirks, Carl Silva and Robert Dickinson are doing their share toward making the successful season the Cherokees have enjoyed this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Leland Cutler and family will leave us next week for their home in the city during the winter months. They plan to return as early in the spring as the weather permits.

The Parent-Teacher Association will give a Hollowe'en party to the children of the neighborhood on the evening of October 31t. There will be motion pictures, games appropriate to the occasion and some good things to eat.

County's Health Shows Well In State Report

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 18 (CNB) —If health is wealth, then California again this year will prove her rights to the title as the Golden State.

With tally of communicable diseases reported to state authorities dropping steadily with passage of fall from a remarkably lew peak reached in mid-summer, San Mateo county's health report today appears excellent, as chartered on the books of State Health Director Walter M. Dickie.

Reports for the current week, show no cases of communicable disease within the county's confines.

With Friends Once More

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

What joy it brings to see again
Those good old friends I usèd to know—
To meet the women and the men
Who were my playmates long ago!

The same dear smiles are here today
That greeted me in childhood years,
Though temples now are touched with gray
And eyes have learned the hurt of tears;

The same glad grip of cordial hands
(Yes, even warmer than of old!)
That bears to him who understands,
The finest message ever told;

The same unselfish kindliness
And thoughtful hospitality—
Small favors that alone express
True friendship's great reality.

Oh, life is richer than before
And lighted with a deeper glow,
For I am with my friends once more—
Those good old friends of long ago!

Amendment No. 1 Will Get Big Vote In Rural Counties

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, October 25 — The people in 57 of the 58 counties of California knew what they were doing when they ratified the federal plan of reapportionment in 1926 by a substantial majority, Assemblyman Isaac Jones of Ontario declared today in a statement to Ralph H. Taylor of the Agricultural Legislative Committee, urging support of Proposition No. 1 on the November ballot making the farmers' reapportionment plan effective.

"In voting 'yes' on this measure the voters will simply be ratifying their previous wishes," Jones claimed, "which were expressed when they adopted the reapportionment constitutional amendment providing that the Assembly be elected on a strictly population basis."

Emphasizing the fairness of the federal scheme of reapportionment for the State of California, the Ontario assemblyman called attention to its success in the government of the United States, where each state is limited to two senators apiece and the House of Representatives is organized on a strictly population base.

STATE'S HEALTH IS HOLDING HIGH MARK

Communicable Ills Show Decrease in Past Six Weeks

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, October 25 — California is in better health than usual, today.

So, reports the State Board of Health, citing the very few cases of communicable diseases prevailing in the state at present.

Mosquito abatement is apparently having results with only 18 cases of malaria, which is transmitted by mosquito bite, noted in the last six weeks and nine of these had just enterel the state.

In spite of a flurry of typhoid in Kern county, due to infected raw milk and in Stanislaus and Tulare counties from unknown causes, the health board reported, that the number of typhoid cases was running unusually low for this season of the year.

Rabies, however, has been unusually prevalent, especially in Los Angeles, Riverside and San Bernardino counties, while the situation in San Mateo county has been brought under control, according to the medical authorities.

Work men excavating in front of the Kearney property on Oak Grove avenue unearthed an ancient coin, on the reverse side of which was the inscription "Good for one drink at the Oak Grove Villa." In days remote this medium of exchange was the coin of the realm, but since the reign of Old Man Volstead have ceased the coinage of this money. Several boys and girls seeing the coin taken from the earth believed that it was prehistoric and they intend to write a thesis on the wonderful find.

Tomorrow night Mrs. Jay Cooper, residing on Glenwood avenue will be hostess to the Study Club at a Hallowe'en card party. Mrs. Cooper is a clever hostess and those who attend the party will enjoy a pleasant evening. About twenty-five will be present.

The great number of wild ducks that are flying over this section to the Spring Valley lakes during the twilight hours would indicate that there is a wet winter in store for the state. This is an old Indian sign of a stormy winter. Let us hope these signs will come through. The birds may be on the air trails that leads to the happy land where dreams come true.

The Hugh Porters have gone to Europe expecting to be gone for the remainder of the year. Many improvements will be made at the estate on the Ringwood road during their absence.

The Hoover-for-President Woman's Club of Menlo Park is doing splendid work in this district. Every voter has been seen and importuned to vote for Mr. Hoover. It is believed that Menlo Park will give a large mapority to the Reublican standard bearer. The women predict that Mr. Hoover will be given a 500 majority in this city, while the outlying district will be consderably larger. Both the Men's Hoover Club and the woman's organization are to work like beavers to see that the voters come to the polls on Tuesday, Nov. 6th. A record vote is expected

There's something new in speeds for them and we all know how coaches, especially track and crew, are always seeking that thing they call speed," continued Webb.

"Four forward speeds, equipment on all Graham-Paige models except the 610, allow the advantages of a greater gear range without tending to alter driving habits. For ordinary every day driving the Graham-Paie gear lever is manipulated "standard," that is, the driver employs second, third and fourth gears in the same manner as he would first, second, and high with three speed forward arrangement. The Graham- Paige low is latched out to the side and seldom required except in cases, where unusual power is required.

"The higher high 'fourth speed' which permits more speed with decreased engine exertion and less fuel consumption is a feature that is winning thousands of owners for Graham-Paige. Such features are in demand today by the man who has a great deal of traveling to do.

Agriculture Nets Students Incomes

By LAWRENCE MONFORT

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 25—(CNB) Your successor, Mr. Farmer of San Mateo county, bids fair to be a better farmer than his dad—unless fiures lie.

The son and heir is making money today while going to school—not as a sideline, but as a part of his agricultural education, for educators, nowadays, realize that while knowing how to coax barley from the soil and how to fatten hogs is knowledge not to be despized, selling them is of equal importance.

So in such high schools as now have or are preparing to offer agricultural coures, they're training the youngster to be a business man, as well as an agriculturalist, and if the boys like that avocation as well as the big profits they rolled up last year, there's no need to worry about "how you're gonna keep 'em down on the farm."

There are more than 7200 such super-farmers of the future coming along in California high schools today, according to Julian A. McPhee, state supervisor of agricultural education, and the popularity of this comparatively new school venture is such that federal funds provided are quite inadequate.

This is no pipedream—unless cold hard cash is the stuff of which dreams are made. The labor income of 2269 of these high school lads as chalked last year netted them collectively $232,776.75.

These profits were wrested from alfalfa, beef and dairy cattle, hogs, berries, ducks, field and truck crops, goats, grain, hay, hogs, horses, poultry sheep or what have you.

In fact, the state's agricultural high school students showed they could make money in any farm vocation by combing knowledge of husbandry with the business training they also are receiving.

And—this is for the benefit of orchardists and vineyardists—these lads netted $10,265.36 from 235½ acres of vineyard and $38,220.70 from 518 acres of orchard last season.

Their labor income from handling 21,194 hens in the egg business netted them $17,712.51, and raising poultry yielded them, $30,11.65 from 84,021 fowls. The return from 2280 sheep was $25,165.40; from 1850 hogs, $21,348.58 and from 255 cows in dairy production, $19,027.54. Even 516 stands of bees yielded $1,678.14.

Y. M. C. A. Club To Hold Meet At U. C. Campus

The Y. M. C. A. Pioneer Club boys are looking forward with keen interest to the annual football meet to be held at the University of California campus on Saturday, October 27th.

The meet which starts at 10 o'clock at Berkeley is for boys 12 to 15 years of age. The events that run off are drop-kicking for goal, punting for distance, forward passing for accuracy, and forward passing for distance.

So that every boy will have equal opportunity, boys of the various ages are kept separate and a point system is used which gives the boys of twelve years of age as much opportunity as the larger and more developed boys of fifteen.

To the boy having the best individual record a football helmet is awarded. To the club having the best average record per member, based on the full enrollment of the club is given a fine football. This makes it so that the club that has the largest turn-out of members has the best chance for the club honor.

The Roosevelt Pioneer Club of Redwood City won both the individual and club honors from not only all the clubs of San Mateo county but San Francisco as well, last year.

After the meet the entire group have been invited to be the guests of the student body of the University of California to see their game with the Olympic club.

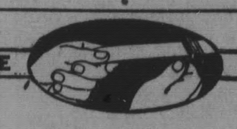
STROPPING IS ESSENTIAL TO THE PERFECT SHAVE



You'd be FIRED

If you were a barber and used an unstropped blade

Also a New and Finer Shaving Cream
Produced by the Makers of The Valet AutoStrop Razor
35c—TRY A TUBE

IN every barber shop in the world, since shaving first began, every barber has stropped his blades before each shave he gave. That is because after the first shave no blade that has not been properly stropped is in fit condition to touch your face. It is absolutely essential that the rough, jagged needle points of the cutting edge be smoothed out and re-aligned.

You can do this in a jiffy with the new Valet AutoStrop Razor—the only razor with an automatic stropping device which quickly sharpens the blade without removing from the holder.

But that's not its only advantage. Twenty-one years of research and the expenditure of over $1,000,000 have resulted in many distinctive improvements which make this really different razor even better than before.

With the new Valetite-processed blades it is a marvel of shaving ease. Try the new Valet AutoStrop Razor. You'll quickly learn to like it. And never again, as long as you live, will you shave with an unstropped blade.

The RED LAMP

THE STORY

Events of the story as set forth in the journal of William A. Porter, professor of English literature:

The professor's uncle, Horace Porter, died mysteriously at his home, Twin Hollows, now the professor's property. Jane, the professor's wife, is a psychic. She insists Uncle Horace, dead for a year, had attended his class reunion and produces a snapshot to prove her contention. Professor Cameron, interested in psychical research, inclines to the idea of psychic photography. With their niece, Edith, the Porters go to Twin Hollows for their vacation, despite Jane's reluctance. A letter Horace had been writing at the time of his death shows that he was interested in spiritualism. It hints of danger. A "red lamp" is mentioned. They take up their residence in the lodge, because of Jane's aversion to the house. Warren Halliday, in love with Edith, comes to live in the boathouse. A number of sheep are mysteriously killed in the vicinity. The slayer leaves a cabalistic sign at the scene of the killings. Greenough, a detective, arrives and Porter has a feeling that he is under suspicion. Twin Hollows is rented to an elderly, partially paralyzed man, Bethel, who, with his secretary, Gordon, takes possession. A youth, Carroway, on watch for the sheep killer, disappears. Porter has the red lamp hidden in a room of which he alone has the key, but many people, including the professor himself, believe they have seen its reflection at Twin Hollows.

Perhaps Halliday is right. (Note: In his suggestion that Jane and I take the sloop and go down the coast for a few days.) If any sheep are killed in my absence or anything more serious should happen, it will serve to rout Greenough's absurd determination to involve me, and provide a complete alibi. At the same time, it will be rest and recreation for Jane, and it may put me in a better frame of mind.

Peter Geiss, he thinks, would go with us as captain and bunk under a pup tent, leaving the cabin to Jane and myself.

(On board the sloop) July 10.

Amazing, the celerity with which youth thinks and acts. Tonight Jane and I—and Peter Geiss—are rolling gently to our anchor in Bass cove, close enough in to be quiet and far enough out to escape the morquitos. And yet only yesterday the plan was an amorphous thing, floating in the air between Halliday and myself, a mere ghost of an idea, without material substance.

The sloop is tidy. In even fairly seaworthy. Her bottom has today been scrubbed with a broom, and her sails, slightly mildewed, still present from a distance a certain impressiveness.

"What," I shout at Peter Geiss, "is that small sail in front? Forward, I mean."

"How's that?"

"The sail there, what's its name?" I say, pointing. "Name?"

"I'll say it's a shame," he says. "Canvas on this boat cost the old gentleman a lot of money."

By and by, however, I learn the jib and the flying jib.

We have a small cabin, with four bunks in it, and two of these are now neatly and geometrically made up, ready for the night. In Jane's small closet there is food of all sorts, neat rows of tins and wax-paper packages. If we are washed out to sea we can, I imagine, live indefinitely on deviled ham, sardines and cheese. And I have always my fishing line.

Ah! a tug at it!

July 11.

My worries are dropping from me. Helena Lear is with Edith, and no doubt Halliday is camped on their doorstep, as vigilant as a watch dog, and certainly more dependable than Jock. I can see, too, with better perspective how absurd my anxiety has been as to Greenough. It is his business to believe every man guilty until he has proved himself innocent. And am I not now in the act of proving my innocence?

But my problem remains. And trying to solve it is like playing solitaire with a card missing. I have, we will say, lost the knave of clubs out of my pack, and without it the game cannot go on.

Halliday, I know, believes that there is a possible connection between the killer and Uncle Horace's letter. He believes, in other words, that some curious and perhaps monstrous idea lies behind the sheep-killing, and that it may be the same idea to which the letter refers.

"There is something behind it," he asserts. "Something so vital to the man who believes it that he is ready to kill—has killed certainly once and possibly twice—to protect it."

But the nature of the idea, or conviction, he nobly evades.

"And this monstrous idea was to kill sheep, and build a stone altar?"

"How do we know that isn't merely a propitiatory sacrifice, Skipper? A sort of preliminary to the real thing?"

"And what is to be the real thing?"

"What is the wickedest crime you can name, against society?"

"The taking of human life."

"Exactly."

But this, as he says, is as far as he goes. He is, however, careful to say that his theory has got him somewhere; that is, that there is a definite idea behind what has been happening.

"An insane one, then."

"Not necessarily," he objects. "Your Uncle Horace didn't write that letter to a man he considered insane."

Peter Geiss has his own theory about poor Carroway's death. Carroway, he says, probably located the boat; he could do that by cutting off his engine and listening for the oars. Then, in black darkness, he steered toward it, probably with the idea of driving the fellow back. But Peter does not think that Carroway would have closed in on the murderer, unarmed as he was.

"The chances are," he said today, "that the fellow crept upon him, quietlike, and leaped into the launch."

"But he was unarmed, too," I said remembering the knife under our slip.

It seemed to me that Peter not only heard that with surprising distinctness, but that he shot a stealthy glance at me.

"He had an oar," he said, and fell back into his customary taciturnity.

In our fore-rigging hangs our riding light. It should be white, but as in a burst of energy this evening I scraped a supper plate over the side, I also scraped off the lantern. So it is red, our red sailing light. It reminds me of the lamp at home. I think about light in general. What do I know about light, anyhow? That it is a wave, a vibration, and that only within a certain fixed range can it be perceived by my human sensorium; that, below the infra-red, and above the ultra-violet, are waves our human eye cannot perceive. Then, all around us are things to which our human senses do not react. How far dare I extend that? From invisible things to invisible beings is not so far, I dare say.

What is reality and what is not? Only what we can see, hear, touch or taste? But that is absurd. Thought is a reality; perhaps the only reality.

But can thought exist independent of the body? The spiritists believe it can. And undoubtedly the universe is full of unheard sounds; all the noises in the world go echoing around our unhearing ears for centuries, and then comes the radio and begins to pick them up for us.

But the radio requires a peculiar sort of receiving instrument, and so with the sights and sounds beyond our normal ken. Jane may be such an instrument. So for all I know may be Peter Geiss, snoring in his pup tent. Even myself—

(Note: I fell asleep here, and the entry is incomplete.)

July 12.

Just what did Peter Geirs see last night?

If I were asked to name, in order of their psychic quality, the three persons on this boat, I would put Jane first and Peter last.

He is a materialist. Not for him the interesting abstractions, the controversial problems of the universe. The life of the mind, the questions of the soul, are hidden from him. His food, his tobacco, the direction of the wind, the state of the tide, these cover the field of his speculations and anxieties. And yet—Peter saw something last night.

It was about one o'clock in the morning, and he had wakened and crawled out of his pup tent, with, according to him, "the feeling that we were in for a blow. There was a cold wind across my feet."

So he rose, and he saw that our red lantern was burning low, and gingerly stepping across me, reached into a locker for the oil can. When he straightened up he saw a shadowy figure standing in the bow of the boat, directly under the lantern.

He thought at first that it was I, but the next moment he had stumbled across me as I lay supine, and the oil can fell and went a-rolling. The noise did not disturb the figure, and Peter gave a long look at it before he howled like a hyena and brought me up all standing.

It was only then that it disappeared. "Just blew to windward," according to Peter. I never saw it at all.

Peter did not go to bed again all night, but sat huddled by the wheel, staring forward, a queer old figure of terror without hope. And I admit I was not much better.

For Peter says that it was that of a man in a dressing gown, and that "it looked like the old gentleman." By which he means my Uncle Horace.

Ellis landing.

We have had bad news, and are preparing to land and take a motor back.

Edith wires that Halliday has been hurt. She gives no details.

July 14.

Halliday's condition is not critical, thank God.

We found him (Note: In my bedroom here at the Lodge) with Edith and Helena fussing over him, and with his collar bone broken, the result, not of the attack but of his ditching the car.

For he is the indirect victim of an attack.

On the evening of the 12th he was on his way to the station at Oakville to meet Helena Lear and Edith, who were in town on some mysterious feminine errand which detained them until the late train.

At eleven o'clock, then, he took the car and started off, and as he was early took the longer route through the back country. The one by Sanger's mill and the Livingstone place. It was near the drive into Livingstones' that a man carrying a sawed-off shotgun stopped the car and asked for a lift into town. He was, he said, one of Starr's special deputies, watching for the sheep-killer.

It was very dark, and he could only see the outlines of the deputy. But as, all along, he had come across men similarly armed—"The fence corners were full of them," he says—he thought nothing of it, and told the fellow to jump in.

"I hadn't seen him," he said, "but I got an impression of him. You know what I mean. A heavy square type, and he got into the car like that, slowly and deliberately. I think he had a cigar in his mouth, not lighted; he talked like it, anyhow."

Once in the car the man was taciturn. Halliday spoke once or twice, and got only a sort of grunt in reply, and finally he began to be uneasy. He had, he says, the feeling that the fellow's whole body was taut, and that his silence was covering some sort of stealthy motion, "or something," he adds, rather vaguely.

"And of course he had his gun. Lying across his knees as well as I could make out."

They had gone about a mile by that time, and then Halliday began to smell a queer odor.

"He was not trying to anesthetize me," he is certain. "He'd had it in his pocket, and something had gone wrong; the cork came out, perhaps. Anyhow, all at once it struck me that ether was a queer thing for one of Starr's deputies to be carrying, and I felt I was in for trouble."

He took his left hand quietly from the steering wheel, and began to fumble in the left hand pocket of the car, where he had put his revolver. And although he is confident he made no sound, the fellow must have had ears like a bat, for just then Halliday saw him raise the gun, and as he ducked forward the barrel of it hit the seat back behind him with a sickening thud.

But he had somehow turned the wheel of the car, and the next moment it had left the road. Halliday made a clutch at it, but it was too late; he saw, as the car swung, the lights of another car ahead and coming toward them; then they struck a fence, and the machine turned over.

He had been found, by the people in the other car, unconscious in the wreckage, and brought to the Lodge. No sign of the other man was discovered.

But this story, curious and ominous as it is, is as nothing to my sensations today when I visited my small garage, where my car is awaiting insurance adjustment before undergoing repairs.

The point of the matter is this: Greenough has already been to see our invalid, and has assured him that he has been the victim of an ordinary attempt at a hold-up.

So Greenough dismisses the possibility of any connection between Halliday's trouble and the unknown malefactor; in a word, my absence has probably not altered his suspicion of me a particle. Or had not, for within the next half hour I propose to show him that an absolute connection exists between the two.

On the right-hand cushion of my car, which during the salvaging of it was thrown upside down into the rear, there is marked an infinitesimal circle in chalk, enclosing a crude triangle. I have sent for Greenough.

Later: Truly the way of the innocent is hard.

Doctor Hayward was making his afternoon call on Halliday when the detective came, and as I feel confident that the doctor is in Greenough's confidence I was glad to spring my little bombshell on them both like Bunyan's Man in an Iron Cage. "I am now a man of despair, and am shut up in it."

Edith was on the veranda when the detective came, and young Gordon was with her. During our absence he has struck up with her an acquaintance of sorts, but she dislikes him extremely. She has, Jane tells me, nicknamed him Shifty.

As Hayward was still upstairs, I sparred politely with Greenough for a few minutes. We had had good weather for the trip; fishing was only fair. It was too bad to be brought back as we were. Yes, but if things like that were going on, it was better to be on the ground. "What sort of things?" he asked.

"We have had two murderous attacks, haven't we? One successful, and one not."

"So you class this little affair of young Halliday's with the other?"

"Don't you?"

"Not until I've got something that ties them together, Mr. Porter."

Hayward had come in and stood inside the doorway, gnawing at his fingers and listening.

"But if you found something did tie them together?"

"For instance?"

"I'm going to ask you something. Was there or was there not something drawn on the top of the engine box of the boat from which Carroway disappeared?"

"How do you know that?" he shot at me. And like a fool I said, thinking to protect Peter Geiss: "That doesn't matter, does it? It's the fact I'm after."

"Suppose there were. What would that prove?"

"And suppose I can show you another, and similar mark on my car, made there by Halliday's assailant before he struck at him?"

"It's there, is it?" he said, and looked up at Hayward.

"It is there."

He got up, the remains of that smile still plastered on his face, and confronted me.

"That's curious," he said. "I examined that car in the ditch before they moved it, Mr. Porter. And I've been over it here with the doctor, since. If there's anything there of the sort you describe, it's been put there since yesterday afternoon."

And then I saw where I stood. They believed that, finding Halliday assaulted during my absence, I was attempting to link that assault with the sheep-killing and with Carroway's death, and turn it to my own advantage. In other words, to prove that the reign of terror had gone on in my absence!

A drowning man, swimming exhaustedly toward a log which sinks when he touches it, must have much the same sensation that I had, as I stood there facing Greenough's vile smile and the doctor's searching gaze.

"You can go out and look," I said feebly. "It's there."

I did not go with them. I heard Edith and Gordon follow them out, and then I sat down and faced my situation.

And indeed it has passed the point of philosophical endurance. Even if Carroway's body is not found and no charge of murder can be brought, it is not hard to see what power lies in this detective's hands, backed by his conviction of my guilt. He may not imprison me, but he can cost me my reputation, even my position in the university. He can hound me out of the only life I know and am fitted for.

It is well enough for Halliday to say that we can assume a counter-offensive. When? With him temporarily crippled, and every act of mine watched and questioned? And, even with all other things equal, how?

Nor do I see, as he does, any possible clew in young Gordon finding the chalk with which the drawing was done, behind the lawn-roller in the garage, a fact which Edith reported after Hayward and Greenough had gone, or in the scrap of paper in which it was wrapped when found. For one thing, Edith's memory as to what was on the paper may be at fault. Naturally, not knowing my situation, she would observe it only casually.

According to Clara, the only persons visiting the car after it was brought back yesterday morning were Annie Cochran and Thomas, who were there when it was returned; Greenough, who spent some time there while the doctor made his call on Halliday; the doctor himself, who wandered in later to look at it; young Gordon, who she says showed particular interest in it and a sort of ghoulish amusement, and the Livingstones.

But as the garage door was unlocked all night, such speculation is purely futile.

Edith suggests malicious mischief.

Her explanation of the paper found about the chalk and what was on it is simple. That in itself, she concludes, proves her contention: "It looked as if children had been playing with a typewriter," she says. And she has reproduced it from memory, as nearly as possible, Greenough having carried it off with him.

It was done, she says, on a typewriter in a curious jumble of capitals and small letters, and the paper was perforated at the side, as if it were from a loose-leaf notebook. Also, it had been torn, so that only a portion of the typing remained.

This portion was, according to her, as follows:

GeI.Tr, K. 28.

(Note: As will be seen, Edith's memory was extremely good. She made only one error in the cipher. The final number, 28, should, of course, have been 24.)

Tonight I have had a long talk with Halliday. It appears that the time of Peter Geiss' apparition almost exactly coincides with the attack. This, however, does not impress Halliday as it does me.

"You have to remember, Skipper," he says, "that old Geiss has been scared almost out of his wits the last few weeks. And the Carroway affair has carried the terror right out onto his domain, which is the water."

"Then why didn't he see Carroway?"

"Search me," he said, with a shrug that set him wincing. "What's bothering me is why doesn't anybody see Carroway? Eight days, and no body found yet."

When I left him a few minutes ago, he had Edith's memory copy of the paper found in the garage, and was propped up in bed with a pencil.

"If we had the original we'd be better off," he said. "It oughtn't to be hard to find the typewriter in the vicinity that wrote it. And if Greenough isn't crazy with the heat he's looking for it now."

I glanced at my own portable machine, sitting on the table, and he followed my eyes and smiled.

"You've got your best alibi right there," he said, "if this turns out to be a cipher. And I think it is."

He has, it appears, some small knowledge of ciphers, and from the mixture of capitals and small letters he believes he recognizes this one. But it requires a key word, or two key words.

"Even without it," he says, "it could be solved, possibly, if I had enough of it. But with only this scrap—! And I don't get the number added to it."

The idea of this type of cipher, I gather, is to take a word, or two words, containing thirteen letters of the alphabet, no one used twice. Written first in small or lower case size these letters represent the first thirteen letters of the alphabet. The same word or words repeated in capitals becomes the second half of the alphabet.

Thus the words "subnormal diet" becomes a key in this fashion:

subnormaldiet SUBNORMALDIET
abcdefghijklm nopqrstuvwxyz

But as "subnormal diet" was the only key phrase we could think of, and as it obviously did not fit, I left him still biting the end of his pencil, and came to complete this record.

Sunday, July 15.

Again, a quiet morning, and I am still at large. Jane is worried. She knows nothing, but she suspects everything. By that, I mean that she is somehow aware, after her own curious fashion, that there is something wrong with her world. She watches me, when I am not looking at her. She has an odd, rather furtive, dislike of Doctor Hayward. And she is almost criminally forwarding Edith's love affair.

Since Halliday was brought here Jane and I have shared her bedroom, and this morning, buttoning my collar, I said:

"The sooner that boy goes back to the boathouse, the better."

"Why?" she demanded, almost militantly.

Between You and Me

"Common sense is the most uncommon kind of sense."

By HAROLD BELL WRIGHT

Number One

"Hit would sure be a God's blessin' if every feller would let everybody else do the things that he wants everybody else to let him do himself. At the same time there ain't no sort of sense in lettin' the other feller do to you what you wouldn't do to yourself."—Preachin' Bill.

DID you ever notice how many of our old proverbs and sayings are born of a very human wish to justify an inhuman selfishness? By making excuses into proverbs we try to make selfishness respectable. Well, between you and me, most of these old saws need refiling.

"If you don't look out for yourself no one will look out for you."

I suppose that choice bit of devil's philosophy dates back to the time when Mr. Cave Man was first struck with the bright idea that it would be easier to steal his neighbor's stone hatchet than to find a good rock and make one for himself.

To most of us, in this present generation of cliff-dwellers and hatchetmen, this ancient proverb is the law of life and the gospel of success. By it we justify every crime we commit against our neighbors. To our children it is mother's milk.

But consider those who have looked out for themselves so zealously that no one now would look out for them if they were walking blindfolded on the edge of the pit. By their selfishness they have forfeited the right to the respect of their fellows, and enjoy the unselfish love and confidence of no man, woman, or child. Having never hesitated to betray others to their own self-interest, they are met on every side by eyes of suspicion, abhorrence and hate. Surrounded by self-seeking followers, but without real friends, they hear always as they pass, the warning cry of the people: "unclean, unclean!"

"The Lord helps those who help themselves." says the cop as he dips his paw into the basket of the old peanut vender. And, "The Lord helps those who help themselves," says the banker who puts his soft, white fingers into the earnings of the workers, the little all of the widows, and the meager savings of the old.

> Great souls have lived greatly without most of the things which we of these days call necessities and to which we give our lives.

But some fine day a long-suffering people will rise up and cry with righteous resolution and terrible meaning: "The Lord help those who dare to help themselves!"

Yes, the philosophy of "give and take" is sound and good when it is written down exactly that way. But when one writes "give" in almost invisible letters, and spreads "take" in shouting capitals clear across the page, there is something wrong with the line. Give or you shall not take.

When all is said and done no one may draw unlimited checks on the Bank of Life without occasionally making deposits. And, by the same token, that which one deposits one is permitted to take again because it is one's own. If we give hatred, we are hated. If we give friendship, we have friends. If we respect others, others respect us. If we trust no one, no one will trust us. If we give nothing, we receive nothing. If we refuse happiness and well-being to others, we cannot hope to take the like for ourselves.

Do you remember what happened to the goose that laid the golden egg?

Well, but did you ever ask what happened to the poor fool who killed the goose?

He went flat broke, that's what happened to him.

Yes, you see, he figured he could save all expense of caring for the goose and take all her gold by the same operation. He thought he could give nothing and take everything, and he found the error in his calculations too late.

There is every reason to believe that if this person had given his goose some decent encouragement or shown some appreciation of her efforts in his behalf, he could have continued to profit. If he had given her the three square meals per day and the comfortable nest to which she was justly entitled, and had taken her out to a movie once in a while, or treated her to some sort of a sundae now and then between eggs, he would be enjoying golden omelets for breakfast even unto this day. By trying to take everything and give nothing, he lost his income and his goose, and proved himself one of the prize fools of history.

"Live and let live," is only another way of saying: If you do not let live you will die.

"No man liveth unto himself" is not a preachment; it is the plain statement of a scientific fact. Anyone who ignores that fact dies. The death of such a person might not matter so much, perhaps, but for the equally scientific fact that "No man dieth unto himself."

All of which leads to this: While no man can live without some consideration for others, each must do his own living. One can do much to help others live but, when all is said and done, no one can do the other fellow's living for him.

The moment one discovers that the only thing of real importance in life is living, that moment one begins truly to live.

The keystone in the arch of a well-lived life is this: To freely grant to others the privileges and rights one demands for one's self. And to firmly demand for one's self the privileges and rights one grants to others.

Most of us are so busy making a living that we have no time left in which to live. But to make a side issue of living in order to live, is not intelligent, to say the least.

Business, politics, the sciences and arts, religion, education, and whatever else we commonly bother about, are at best only side issues of living.

Great souls have lived greatly without most of the things which we of these days call necessities and to which we give our lives.

We work at living like some folks farm. The farm is all right—broad, fertile fields, wooded slopes, and well-watered valleys—but the weeds have choked out the corn, taken possession of the potatoes, and overrun the garden. The hay lies unstacked, all sodden with the damp, and the wheat, full ripe, drops its good grains at each breath of passing breeze. The fences are down, the barn a shanty, the house a hovel, while pigs roam at will over the entire place. Six or seven hounds on the front porch, a collection of firearms in the kitchen, coon skins and fox hides stretched on the south wall of the house, and a well-defined odor of polecat pervading the atmosphere of the home tell the story.

Hunting is a pleasant and profitable side issue to farm life, but one does not plow corn nor cultivate potatoes with coon dogs. Neither does one harvest wheat with shotguns or rifles.

Never, perhaps, in human history were the opportunities for living so great as they are today. Certainly our farm is as large as when "the sower went forth to sow." And the need for great lives is as pressing today as when the Master said: "This do and thou shalt live." Souls have not depreciated in value since Calvary, but the art of growing great souls is fast becoming a lost art.

Our trouble is the weeds of life are getting the start. The grain of life is being wasted. Our fences are down and all the hogs in creation have full right of way in our fields and gardens. And this is so because the side issues of modern life take too much of our time, thought and energy.

With a full pack of orders, clubs, circles and interests, and with guns of public oratory, the press and polite conversation, we hunt the coons, foxes, 'possums and polecats of personal publicity, social prestige, or public favor, satisfied with a few skins to tack up on the south side of the house.

Go to, friends! Let us hoe our corn, dig our potatoes and harvest our wheat.

But don't forget the farmer in the parable who was all for bigger and better barns. He also died.

"Look out for number one," is in reality a solemn warning, the same as a railway crossing sign, "Look out for the cars." It means: nothing that others can do to you is to be compared with the evil that you can do to yourself.

Preaching? Sure! What did you think I was doing?

Touches that Add Style to Dresses

By MAE MARTIN

It's amazing to see how faded, out-of-style dresses can be transformed by a few buttons, a little braid and the quick magic of home dyeing or tinting. You don't need any experience to tint or dye successfully if you are sure to use true, fadeless Diamond Dyes. Tinting with them is easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little more time to "set" the colors. They never give things that re-dyed look which comes from using inferior dyes. Abundant Proof as to Painter's Doings

An old man sat on a seat in the park. The birds were singing and the flowers were fragrant and fresh, but there was a strong odor of paint in the air.

The old man looked round and two seats away saw a painter slapping green paint on a dilapidated looking seat. Hurriedly he looked down at the seat upon which he was sitting. Yes, it was wet, and, what was more, his trousers were smothered in green.

His anger was justifiable, and, rushing up to the painter, he cried, excitedly:

"Why don't you put 'Wet Paint' on the seats?"

"Well, that's what I am doin', ain't it?" retorted the painter.

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food. It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 119 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it helps."

Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

Widower Would Save Town

Coming to the front when it was announced that South Mimms, England, has had no marriages for 18 months, and there seemed no prospect of saving the town's reputation in the near future, a widower, aged seventy-four, has volunteered to wed if he can find a bride with sufficient income for two. He wrote the vicar of South Mimms that he is willing but could not provide a home because he has no income, is crippled in the left leg and has nothing but his old-age pension and a good character.

Sheriff McGrath Kiwanis Speaker

Sheriff James J. McGrath of this county spoke before the Redwood City Kiwanis Club Wednesday. The sheriff spoke on the amusing incidents which occur even in so unamusing a place as the county jail. The chairman of the meeting was Justice of the Peace Edward I. McAuliffe.

The sheriff after an interesting talk closed his remarks with the following poem written and sent to him by a life termer in one of the state's prisons:

The Land of the Living Dead

This is a land of stern command;
A land of fear and dread;
Of prayers unheard and hopes deferred;
The land of the living dead.

This is a land where hate runs riot;
And everyone seeks to kill;
A look, then a thrust; a stain on the dust:
Then a nameless grave on the hill.

In this land men know no fear;
And angels never tread;
The coyotes creep to their last long sleep;
In the land of the living dead.

And some there are who look afar
Who see no hope ahead;
But the life of a slave, and a nameless grave;
In the land of the living dead.

New Nash Cars On Exhibit Here

A special exhibit of new coupes and cabriolets, also Royal and Regal models of the Nash "400" Series is being featured at the Nash showrooms here this week and at dealer establishments throughout the Northern California territory.

The motoring public is cordially invited to view these new Nash models, which because of the tremendous demand experienced for new Nash offerings, have just got into production in sufficient numbers to permit western dealer displays.

"The exhibit may well be called the 'Style Show of the Season' for Nash has already by public acclaim taken its place as the style leader of the motor world," said Ed Zane, assistant general manager of the Pacific Nash Motor Company yesterday.

"The new models have many pleasing features in addition to the improvements and advancements which have marked the Nash '400' models, as the quality and performance leader of the season.

"Six wire wheels, with the spares mounted in fender wells on the side of the cars, add to their stylish appearance. These new models more than ever emhasize Nash leadership in style and beauty. Since the introduction of the new Nash models on June 21st, more than 80,000 of these new and finer motor cars have gone forth from the Nash factories to supply the ever increasing public demand.

"All past sales records have been broken and so intense has been the demand that many attractive models originally planned could not possibly be produced until an elargement of production facilities made possible a material stepping up of the factory output.

"Now that the production has been increased, we are able to show for the first time on the coast a complete display of the attractive line and the public is invited to view these latest offerings."
